New Narrative - Threats 2015 and Beyond

Room: Marquis Ballroom, Marquis Level

Mike Walker will set the stage for the 2015 Preparedness Summit with an overarching discussion of the current threats to global health security. Mr. Walker, a senior consultant with the Center for Homeland Defense and Security, will provide an outline for attendees on the full scope of the current threats to global and national health security including infectious disease threats, bioterrorism and cybersecurity. Having spent more than three decades working in the Federal government, including leadership positions in the Army, the White House, the Department of Defense, and Federal Emergency Management Agency, Mike has made many contributions to global health security including supporting development of the National Response Plan and the National Strategy. Mike's role in response to the Oklahoma City and Atlanta Olympics bombings will provide valuable insight into the challenges facing the governmental public health preparedness and response community today.

Think Globally, Plan, Respond, and Recover Locally: The U.S. Global Health Security Agenda

Room: Marquis Ballroom, Marquis Level

Senior federal officials representing the White House, the Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Department of Homeland Security and the World Health Organization will discuss the U.S. global health security strategy and agenda. Their opinions, cultivated through years of experience, will shed light on the current state of the U.S. health security strategy and agenda and how it has evolved in light of new global threats and events, including MERS Co-V, unaccompanied minors, and Ebola. Through the course of their discussion, panelists will explore what roles the different agencies play, and how those roles affect state and local health departments.
